Western Excelsior Launches New Website

Continuing a standard of excellence, Western Excelsior has updated its web site to provide information regarding Western Excelsior products, the erosion and sediment control industry and the benefits realized protecting the environment. The new-look web site was designed to convey information in a simple, organized format that minimizes user effort in locating and obtaining information and documentation. Within the pages of the site, a knowledge base of research and development and design and use documents has been initiated to provide the erosion control professional with easy access to the most current information available. Further, installers of Rolled Erosion Control Products (RECPs) and Sediment Control Logs will be supported with a knowledge base of information pertaining specifically to the installation and use of RECPs and Sediment Control Devices. All Western Excelsior documentation will be available on the site, including new documentation as it becomes available.

Western Excelsior is dedicated to providing the best possible service to its clients through a line of erosion and sediment control products engineered for performance and manufactured for quality. WESTERNEXCELSIOR.COM will provide an efficient avenue for communication with the stakeholders within the erosion control community. Western Excelsior will provide data, knowledge and information in a dynamic, easily accessible format via WESTERNEXCELSIOR.COM, furthering the commitment to its customers, contractors, designers and the environment.
